At OWN Inspiration Camp: Winter 2025, students step into experiences that help them understand how real-world relationships and collaboration work. Before they even think about future careers, they learn something far more important: how to connect, communicate, and grow with others. To understand the value of this, imagine this:

What if your child realized that building a successful team is about complementing skills, not just choosing friends?

What if your child learned how to recruit the right teammates based on roles, skills, and attributes rather than familiarity?

What if your child could discover their unique strengths and learn how to leverage them in any team setting?

What if your child could identify their growth areas and turn them into opportunities for self-improvement?

What if your child could recognize that everyone has a unique intelligence profile and learn how they can contribute meaningful value when part of the right team?

This two-day OWN Inspiration Camp is designed to equip students with the knowledge and skills to understand how meaningful networks are intentionally built. Through engaging workshops, hands-on activities, and real-world challenges, students will gain invaluable insights into communication, collaboration, and self-discovery — skills that help them grow personally and connect meaningfully with others.

What to Expect

Day 1

Learning the Building Blocks of Team Success

After getting to know their peers and mentors, students begin their journey of self-discovery. On the first day, students will explore how industry professionals build and lead high-performing teams. Through self-discovery workshops, they'll uncover their personal strengths and areas for growth, while learning essential skills such as recruiting the right team members and making thoughtful decisions about team dynamics. By the end of the day, students will have a clear understanding of what makes a successful, intentionally built team and how to apply those principles in their own groups.
